Clocks

Time will really fly by when you put together a collection of all the time pieces the world has to offer...

Big ones, little ones, fat ones, small ones, they come in all varieties, thus lending this category to a number of subcategories: grandfather clocks, grandmother clocks, wristwatches, pocket watches...how about sun dials and hourglasses?? They're clocks, aren't they? You can do quite a bit with this category, depending on what particular fancy is. I even know one collector who has the clocks sorted out as to what time is showing on the faces.

If clocks are what makes you tick, this is just the small category for you, and they're easy to trade, too...since you always have 'seconds!' [ouch!] You'll find quite a few clocks pictured on Bank covers, and, of course, they're very common on Jewelers' covers, as well.

You could specialize, perhaps....maybe Rolexes! Whatever you decide, you'll find clock covers going way back to the oldies. Pictured here are several examples of the type of covers you'll run across. Of course, this category will cut across all manumarks, trademarks, and sizes.

I know some collectors who have collected Clocks for a number of years, but the only collection size I'm currently aware of is so small it's not worth printing, since the collection was just in the process of starting at the time. I would imagine that a good collection would number several hundred, if not more.
