

Interesting Covers

John Mathot, CA, sent these in. They're the same cover, but they have different manumarks.

This brings up the old question of whether or not such constitutes two different covers for your collection....HmMMMM!

Of course, with regard to your own collection, you always have the final say as to what the collecting guidelines are...but...if you do count these as different covers...where do you draw the line?

Are they different if the manumark is the same, but with different locations? How about all those Universal covers with the 1, 2, or 3 dots on either side of the manumark? Is the 2-dot cover a different cover from the 3-dot cover? What is the manumark text is the same, but different colors? Different sizes?

It's a perplexing problem. Personally, I don't count them as different covers, but that's just me.